Eating Disorders

Developing a Gold Standard Service

Wednesday 10 February 2016 Hallam Conference Centre London

“Eating disorder services will be receiving a separate £30 million worth of extra funding as the result of a very strong evidence base. This will help to improve community services and meet the aspiration of 95% of children and young people with eating disorders being seen within four weeks, or one week for urgent cases by 2020. We’re throwing good money after good results!”

Alistair Burt, Minister for Community and Social Care August 2015

“Service provision for children and young people with eating disorders is variable across England. Services that are deemed to have good practices offer a ‘stepped care’ model of treatment, based on need, with more intensive support offered to those who are more severely unwell. While most people receive treatment in community services, some (mainly those with anorexia nervosa) receive treatment as day patients or inpatients. The range of service provision means that access to appropriate treatment is inconsistent. Considerable variability exists in referral to treatment pathways for children and young people with an eating disorder. To improve access, commissioners first need to understand the experiences of children and young people and their families or carers.” Access and Waiting Time Standard for Children and Young People with an Eating Disorder, June 2015

“The number of children and young people with an eating disorder is on the rise and it is right that the Government has made this a priority and that we now have a clear waiting time standard. It is clinically proven that patients recover most quickly when we treat them as early and as close to home as possible. By prioritising our focus on doing this we can minimise the number of young people who end up needing more specialised in-patient care.”

Dr Martin McShane, National Clinical Director for Long Term Conditions at NHS England, August 2015

This conference focuses on improving services for children and young people with eating disorders, meeting the new national waiting time standard, and ensuring gold standard care. There is a particular focus on developing rapid early intervention services in line with the new waiting time standard, meeting quality standards for eating disorder services, preventing relapse, commissioning effective services for eating disorder, and looking forward to the 2017 updated NICE guidance.
